PDA GRAPHology ANALYSIS REPORT

A personalized self-discovery report based on traditional graphology

Prepared for
Ajay Zavar

Discover your patterns. Understand your strengths. Choose your next step.

Inksight • Your handwriting, interpreted as a mirror for reflection.

Begin With Awareness

This report is designed to turn handwriting observations into an easy-to-understand self-reflection experience.

01 • Observe

Your handwriting contains visible patterns in size, spacing, slant, pressure, rhythm and letter formation.

02 • Reflect

Traditional graphology uses these patterns to suggest tendencies—not fixed truths or diagnoses.

03 • Apply

The most useful part of the report is what you can do with the insight: strengths to use and patterns to watch.

04 • Choose

Keep what resonates with your lived experience. Treat the report as a conversation starter with yourself.

A note on interpretation

Graphology is a traditional interpretive practice. The observations and scores in this report should be used for self-reflection and entertainment, not as scientifically validated measures of personality, health, financial behavior, relationships, or future outcomes.

How to read your report

Look for the combination of score + interpretation + evidence + practical action. A lower score is not a flaw, and a higher score is not automatically a strength in every situation.

Your Handwriting

The sample used for this report is shown below. The report is based on the patterns visible in the submitted writing sample.

Primary visible cues used in the original report: medium writing size, fairly consistent forms, rightward slant, connected movement, moderate-to-heavy pressure, relatively compact spacing, a slightly rising/wavy baseline, and developed lower-zone forms.

Your Profile Snapshot

Your seven-dimensional profile at a glance.

Overall Life Alignment Quotient

65 / 100

Strongest area: Emotional Balance • 88% | Growth focus: Personal & Inner Growth • 40%

Your Personality Dashboard

A more human way to read your profile—beyond the numbers.

YOUR ARCHETYPE

PROFESSOR

The Thoughtful Strategist

Your handwriting profile points toward a person who tends to think carefully, value meaningful connections, and combine sensitivity with a composed outward style. You may prefer to understand a situation before committing fully, while still showing determination once a direction feels right.

KEY TRAITS

Thoughtful	Committed	Flexible	Balanced
Sensitive	Trust builder	People-oriented	Detail-focused
Motivated	Self-assured	Composed	Reflective

Your profile in one line: thoughtful + people-oriented + committed, with a strong capacity for emotional steadiness and a need to keep personal growth intentional.

Know Your X-Factor

Your strongest dimensions—and what they can look like in everyday life.

Emotional Balance

88

What your profile suggests

You may notice what others need and bring care and steadiness to close relationships.

Make it useful

Use your sensitivity as information, without carrying every emotion as your responsibility.

Thinking & Learning

81

What your profile suggests

You tend to take in information carefully, think things through and stay open to useful input.

Make it useful

Turn careful thinking into a simple decision habit so reflection does not become delay.

Health & Vitality

70

What your profile suggests

The original report describes a natural pull toward movement, activity and energetic engagement.

Make it useful

Consistency matters more than intensity: choose routines you can repeat.

Your Emotional Balance • 88%

How your profile describes the way you handle feelings, pressure, setbacks and close relationships.

YOUR ESSENCE

You bring care and steadiness to close relationships, with a strong sense of emotional awareness. You may feel deeply even when you do not show everything immediately.

YOUR STRENGTH

Your strength lies in noticing what others need and responding with genuine care. When sensitivity is balanced by composure, it can help you build loyal and meaningful bonds.

YOUR GROWTH SHIFT

Let important feelings out a little sooner. A simple, honest response with someone you trust can prevent emotions from accumulating silently.

CORE STYLE

Caring + Steady

MINDFUL ACTION

Name the emotion, breathe slowly, then choose your response.

How we reached this insight

The original report associated this section with observed letter cues such as u, I and k. In the redesigned report, these cues are presented as interpretive evidence rather than proof of a psychological trait.

Your Thinking & Learning • 81%

How your profile describes focus, curiosity, problem-solving and learning.

WHAT YOUR PROFILE SUGGESTS

You take in information carefully, think things through with depth, and prefer decisions you can stand behind. Your style blends logic, research and open-minded thinking.

WHY IT MATTERS

This combination can be valuable when a situation is complex and requires both practical judgment and fresh ideas.

YOUR GROWTH SHIFT

When a decision matters, pause briefly and write down three things: the facts, the options, and the next step. This keeps analysis connected to action.

CORE STYLE

Thoughtful + Analytical

MINDFUL ACTION

Let thoughts settle, then focus on one clear idea.

Original evidence cues: h – ambition • l – learning • b – intellect • n – thinking.

Your Goals & Achievement • 63%

How your profile describes discipline, planning, progress and achievement.

YOUR ESSENCE

You approach goals with a thoughtful, steady style, using research, calm planning and persistence to move forward. You may adapt well, while pressure can sometimes make decisions less clear.

YOUR STRENGTH

You can stay calm while thinking things through, gather information, and keep moving through change. That can support reliable execution in practical work.

WATCH FOR

You may occasionally make goals too broad or take on too much at once. When mental load rises, prioritisation can become harder.

YOUR GROWTH SHIFT

For every important goal, define one next step + three must-do details + one decision you will own. The aim is momentum, not perfection.

Original evidence cues: g – desire • y – money handling • j – saving.

Your Relationships • 63%

How your profile describes communication, connection, trust and personal boundaries.

YOUR ESSENCE

You tend to bring a calm, thoughtful presence to relationships. Valuing other people's views and showing gratitude can help you build trust and keep connections meaningful.

WATCH FOR

When a topic feels sensitive, you may become more fixed in your view or choose comfort over direct honesty. Creating room for another perspective can keep communication open.

MINDFUL ACTION

Pause and ask yourself: "What is another possibility?" before responding to a sensitive topic.

CORE STYLE

Thoughtful + Warm

RELATIONSHIP REMINDER

Clarity and boundaries can coexist with warmth.

Original report trigger: Retracement was interpreted as hesitation to think differently. Inksight presents this as a reflection prompt, not a diagnosis.

Your Money Mindset • 50%

A reflective view of how the original report framed saving, spending, responsibility and financial choices.

YOUR ESSENCE

The original report describes a cautious relationship with money, with a preference for security. Hesitation or emotional weight may sometimes slow decisions around saving, spending or longer-term choices.

WATCH FOR

Avoiding a decision can become a decision of its own. Small, repeatable financial habits can create more clarity than waiting for perfect confidence.

PRACTICAL RESET

Automate a manageable monthly saving amount and review your expenses once a week. Keep the habit simple enough to sustain.

Important: this section is not financial advice and should not be used to make investment or financial decisions.

Original trigger noted: Pastocity was interpreted as holding on to emotions. Inksight reframes this as a self-reflection prompt.

Your Personal & Inner Growth • 40%

This is the biggest opportunity area in the original seven-dimensional profile.

YOUR ESSENCE

The original report describes a deep inner world that can become harder to access clearly when thoughts turn heavy or repetitive. This may sometimes lead to self-doubt or delayed choices.

YOUR GROWTH OPPORTUNITY

You do not need a complete life plan before taking the next step. Growth can begin with a small decision made deliberately and repeated consistently.

1	Reflect What matters most right now?
2	Choose What is one action within your control?
3	Repeat What can you practise weekly?
4	Review What changed after 30 days?

Core style: Reflective + Searching.

Your 30-Day Growth Plan

Turn the report into a small experiment rather than a label.

WEEK 1 • CLARITY

Write down one decision you have been postponing. List the facts, options and next step.

WEEK 2 • EXPRESSION

Have one honest conversation with someone you trust. Say what you need without over-explaining.

WEEK 3 • MOMENTUM

Choose one meaningful goal and reduce it to one daily action you can repeat.

WEEK 4 • REVIEW

Ask: What worked? What drained me? What should I continue, stop or change?

The goal is not to “fix” yourself. It is to test which insights genuinely help you live and work better.

Your Graphology Story

A narrative summary designed to be easier to remember than a page of scores.

Your profile presents a picture of someone who combines thoughtful analysis with warmth and persistence. You may prefer to understand the situation before acting, but once you feel committed, you can show considerable determination. Your strongest reported area—Emotional Balance—suggests a style that values steadiness, care and meaningful connection.

Your Thinking & Learning score reinforces the picture of a person who benefits from careful information processing and practical reasoning. The opportunity is not to think less, but to make thinking more actionable. A short decision ritual can help you move from analysis to execution.

In relationships, the report describes a calm and thoughtful presence. Your development edge is creating enough openness for different viewpoints, especially when a subject feels personal. In goals and achievement, narrowing priorities may help convert persistence into more consistent progress.

The biggest reported growth opportunity is Personal & Inner Growth. Read that score as an invitation rather than a judgement: small deliberate actions can build the confidence that reflection alone cannot.

THE TAKEAWAY

You do not need to become a different person. The most useful shift may be to turn your existing strengths—care, thoughtfulness, persistence and steadiness—into clearer decisions, stronger boundaries and consistent action.

What We Recommend Adding to Future Inksight Reports

These additions can make the product feel more personal, premium and shareable.

1. “What Your Handwriting Suggests”	Put a plain-English interpretation immediately below every major score. Users connect with a sentence before they connect with a number.
2. “Why We See It” evidence cards	Show 2–4 visible handwriting cues behind each insight. This increases transparency and makes the analysis feel less like a black box.
3. Top 5 strengths	Create a visually strong ranking such as Persistence, Communication, Initiative, Practical Thinking and Discipline.
4. Potential blind spots	For every strength, show the possible downside when overused. This makes the report feel balanced rather than flattering.
5. “You may be someone who...”	Add 5–7 highly readable statements. This is the most shareable section for social media.
6. Personalised 30-day plan	End each report with 3–5 actions based on the lowest-scoring areas, rather than generic advice.
7. Shareable result card	Generate a branded card with 3 scores, one headline insight and an Inksight CTA.
8. Method + confidence	Show handwriting quality, observable cues, confidence and limitations. This builds trust as the product scales.

Most important product change: move from “score-heavy report” to “score + interpretation + evidence + action.” The number creates curiosity; the story creates perceived value.

Trust the Process

Self-awareness is most useful when it leads to reflection, experimentation and intentional choices.

A FINAL NOTE

Your handwriting is one input into this experience—not a definitive definition of who you are. Compare the observations with your real experiences, keep what resonates, and question what does not.

About Inksight

Pooja Pawar

Founder, Inksight

Inksight is positioned as a self-discovery experience that helps people explore handwriting patterns through an accessible, personalised report. The goal is to make reflection engaging, practical and easy to understand.

Prepared using the supplied PDA graphology report as the source template and content basis. Brand references have been updated from SoulEra to Inksight, and the founder name has been updated from Shraddha Mittal to Pooja Pawar.

Your Personal Insight Layer

An enhanced companion section to your existing Inksight PDA Graphology Analysis Report

THE PREMIUM SHIFT

Score + interpretation + evidence + action.

The original report remains unchanged. The pages that follow are an appended personalisation layer designed to help you understand what the scores may mean in everyday language, what visible cues informed the reading, and what you can do with the insight.

Prepared for Ajay Zavar

This appendix uses the scores, wording, handwriting cues and interpretive framing already present in your report. It does not replace or rewrite the original analysis.

Important

Graphology is a traditional interpretive practice rather than a scientifically validated personality assessment. These additions are intended for reflection and entertainment; they should not be treated as diagnoses or as definitive statements about health, finances, relationships or future outcomes.

Emotional Balance • 88

Your existing score, translated into plain English and paired with the visible cues and original evidence language.

YOUR SCORE

88

WHAT YOUR HANDWRITING SUGGESTS

You may be someone who stays composed while still noticing what people around you need. Your profile suggests that care and steadiness are important parts of how you handle feelings and close relationships.

WHY WE SEE IT

These are the visible handwriting cues and original report cues used as interpretive evidence—not proof of a trait.

Rightward slant

The sample shows a noticeable rightward slant, traditionally read as outward engagement and emotional reach.

Connected movement

Many strokes flow into one another, suggesting continuity of movement rather than a highly broken writing rhythm.

Fairly consistent forms

Letter forms remain reasonably consistent across the page, supporting the report's theme of steadiness.

Original report cues

The original report linked this section to u – Empathy, I – Self-esteem and k – Society.

STRENGTH

Your strength may be emotional steadiness with warmth.

POTENTIAL BLIND SPOT

When overused, caring can become carrying. You may benefit from remembering that another person's emotion does not automatically become your responsibility.

NEXT MOVE

Name what you feel, pause, and then choose what response is actually yours to make.

Reader prompt: Which part of this interpretation matches your lived experience—and which part does not?

Thinking & Learning • 81

Your existing score, translated into plain English and paired with the visible cues and original evidence language.

YOUR SCORE

81

WHAT YOUR HANDWRITING SUGGESTS

You may be someone who likes to understand a situation properly before committing to an answer. The profile suggests thoughtful information processing, curiosity and a preference for useful, practical understanding.

WHY WE SEE IT

These are the visible handwriting cues and original report cues used as interpretive evidence—not proof of a trait.

Medium writing size

The writing is neither unusually small nor oversized, supporting a balanced visual field for the page.

Fairly consistent forms

Repeated letter forms show reasonable consistency, a cue the original report connects with focused processing.

Connected movement

The connected script suggests continuity as ideas and words move across the page.

Original report cues

The original report identified h – Ambition, l – Learning, b – Intellect and n – Thinking.

STRENGTH

Your strength may be thoughtful analysis that becomes strongest when it is converted into a clear decision.

POTENTIAL BLIND SPOT

Careful thinking can become delay when every option must feel fully resolved before you act.

NEXT MOVE

For important decisions, write: facts → options → next step. Then move.

Reader prompt: Which part of this interpretation matches your lived experience—and which part does not?

Health & Vitality • 70

Your existing score, translated into plain English and paired with the visible cues and original evidence language.

YOUR SCORE

70

WHAT YOUR
HANDWRITING SUGGESTS

The original report suggests a natural pull toward movement, activity and energetic engagement. Read this as a lifestyle reflection rather than a health assessment.

WHY WE SEE IT

These are the visible handwriting cues and original report cues used as interpretive evidence—not proof of a trait.

Developed lower-zone forms Lower-zone forms are visibly developed in the sample; traditional graphology often links this area with physical drive and practical engagement.	Moderate-to-heavy pressure The writing carries noticeable pressure, a cue traditionally associated with energy and force of expression.
Connected movement The continuous movement gives the writing an active, flowing quality.	Original report cues The original report linked this section to d – Competitive, g – Stamina and p – Talent.

STRENGTH

Your strength may be active engagement and the ability to bring energy into what you do.

POTENTIAL BLIND
SPOT

Energy can be spent faster than it is restored. Consistency and recovery matter more than intensity.

NEXT MOVE

Build one repeatable movement or recovery habit and judge it by consistency, not ambition.

Reader prompt: Which part of this interpretation matches your lived experience—and which part does not?

Goals & Achievement • 63

Your existing score, translated into plain English and paired with the visible cues and original evidence language.

YOUR SCORE

63

WHAT YOUR HANDWRITING SUGGESTS

You may be someone who can persist once a direction feels meaningful, but who performs best when priorities are narrowed. Your report points toward thoughtful planning combined with persistence.

WHY WE SEE IT

These are the visible handwriting cues and original report cues used as interpretive evidence—not proof of a trait.

Compact spacing

Words and letters sit relatively close together, giving the page an efficient, concentrated feel.

Connected movement

The connected script supports a sense of continuity from one action to the next.

Slightly rising / wavy baseline

The baseline shows an upward tendency with some wave, suggesting movement and variability rather than a rigidly fixed line.

Original report cues

The original report identified g – Desire, y – Money Handling and j – Saving.

STRENGTH

Your strength may be persistence—but your leverage comes from choosing fewer priorities.

POTENTIAL BLIND SPOT

Persistence can become overextension when too many goals compete for the same attention.

NEXT MOVE

For every major goal, define one next step, three must-do details and one decision you personally own.

Reader prompt: Which part of this interpretation matches your lived experience—and which part does not?

Relationships • 63

Your existing score, translated into plain English and paired with the visible cues and original evidence language.

YOUR SCORE

63

WHAT YOUR
HANDWRITING SUGGESTS

You may be someone who values warmth, trust and thoughtful connection. The report suggests that relationships work best for you when care is paired with openness and clear boundaries.

WHY WE SEE IT

These are the visible handwriting cues and original report cues used as interpretive evidence—not proof of a trait.

Rightward slant The visible rightward slant is traditionally associated with outward orientation and engagement.	Connected movement Connected writing gives the sample a relational, continuous quality.
Relatively compact spacing The relatively compact spacing can be read as a preference for connection and efficient use of space.	Original report trigger The original report used Retracement as a reflection cue around hesitation to think differently.

STRENGTH

Your strength may be creating trust through a calm and thoughtful presence.

POTENTIAL BLIND
SPOT

Warmth can sometimes make direct disagreement uncomfortable. Clarity and boundaries can coexist with care.

NEXT MOVE

Before responding to a sensitive topic, ask: “What is another possibility?”

Reader prompt: Which part of this interpretation matches your lived experience—and which part does not?

Money Mindset • 50

Your existing score, translated into plain English and paired with the visible cues and original evidence language.

YOUR SCORE

50

WHAT YOUR
HANDWRITING SUGGESTS

Your profile invites a practical look at security, saving and decision-making around money. The original report describes caution and a preference for security; this is a reflection prompt, not financial advice.

WHY WE SEE IT

These are the visible handwriting cues and original report cues used as interpretive evidence—not proof of a trait.

Compact spacing The writing uses space efficiently, a cue that can be interpreted as a practical or economical style.	Moderate-to-heavy pressure Noticeable pressure adds a sense of commitment and seriousness to the writing movement.
Connected movement The continuous script suggests decisions may be processed as part of a broader flow rather than as isolated actions.	Original report trigger The original report noted Pastocity and interpreted it as holding on to emotions; Inksight reframes this as a reflection prompt.

STRENGTH

Your opportunity may be turning financial caution into simple, repeatable habits.

POTENTIAL BLIND
SPOT

Waiting for perfect confidence can delay useful action just as much as impulsiveness can.

NEXT MOVE

Automate a manageable saving habit and review expenses once a week; keep investment decisions outside this report.

Reader prompt: Which part of this interpretation matches your lived experience—and which part does not?

Personal & Inner Growth • 40

Your existing score, translated into plain English and paired with the visible cues and original evidence language.

YOUR SCORE

40

WHAT YOUR
HANDWRITING SUGGESTS

This is the lowest score in the seven-dimensional profile, and therefore the clearest invitation to experiment. Your report describes a reflective inner world that may become harder to access clearly when thoughts become heavy or repetitive.

WHY WE SEE IT

These are the visible handwriting cues and original report cues used as interpretive evidence—not proof of a trait.

Slightly wavy baseline The baseline has some visible movement rather than a perfectly uniform path, a useful cue for reflection on changing internal pace.	Compact spacing The relatively close spacing can create a concentrated, inward-feeling visual texture.
Developed lower-zone forms Lower-zone development adds emphasis to the practical/physical part of the writing pattern.	Fairly consistent forms Consistency suggests that the opportunity is not lack of structure, but using structure intentionally for growth.

STRENGTH	Your biggest opportunity may be converting reflection into small, deliberate action.
POTENTIAL BLIND SPOT	Self-analysis can become circular when it is not paired with a decision or experiment.
NEXT MOVE	Choose one action outside your usual comfort zone each week and review what you learn.

Reader prompt: Which part of this interpretation matches your lived experience—and which part does not?

2. Your Top 5 Strengths

A visually ranked view of the qualities that stand out most strongly in the broader interpretation.

01

Persistence

You can keep moving after the initial excitement has passed. The report repeatedly frames you as committed, determined and capable of steady follow-through.

Potential blind spot: When persistence is overused, you may continue with a path longer than necessary simply because you have already invested in it.

Visible / report cues: Compact spacing • connected movement • fairly consistent forms

02

Communication

You may have a naturally engaging way of connecting ideas with people, combining warmth with a composed outward style.

Potential blind spot: Being available and responsive can become over-availability. Not every conversation needs an immediate response or resolution.

Visible / report cues: Rightward slant • connected movement • people-oriented profile

03

Initiative

Once a direction feels right, you may prefer to move rather than wait indefinitely for certainty.

Potential blind spot: Initiative can become taking on too much at once, especially when several opportunities look meaningful.

Visible / report cues: Moderate-to-heavy pressure • connected movement • action-oriented report language

04

Practical Thinking

You tend to bring thoughtfulness back to what can actually be done. The report describes practical reasoning and useful information processing.

Potential blind spot: Practicality can narrow the field too quickly if a new possibility does not have an immediate application.

Visible / report cues: Medium size • consistent forms • compact spacing

05

Discipline

You may work well with structure when the structure serves a meaningful goal. Consistency and commitment are recurring themes in the profile.

Potential blind spot: Structure can become rigidity when the original plan is treated as more important than the outcome.

Visible / report cues: Fairly consistent forms • connected movement • steady profile narrative

3. You May Be Someone Who...

Seven statements designed to be immediately readable—and easy to recognise, challenge or share.

01	You may be someone who thinks things through carefully before making a commitment.
02	You may be someone who cares deeply about the quality of your relationships, not just the number of them.
03	You may be someone who becomes especially determined once a goal feels meaningful.
04	You may be someone who prefers practical understanding over theory that has no clear use.
05	You may be someone who can stay composed while still noticing what others are feeling.
06	You may be someone who can carry several responsibilities at once—but may need to deliberately narrow your priorities.
07	You may be someone whose next level of growth comes less from more thinking and more from consistent action.

A useful test

Circle the two statements that feel most accurate, underline one that surprises you, and question one that does not fit. The goal is reflection—not agreement with every sentence.

4. Your Personalised 30-Day Plan

Built around the lowest-scoring areas in your existing profile: Personal & Inner Growth (40), Money Mindset (50), followed by Goals & Achievement and Relationships (63 each).

WEEK 1 • TURN REFLECTION INTO A DECISION

Choose one decision you have been postponing. Write the facts, options and one next step. Complete that next step within 48 hours.

WEEK 2 • CREATE A SIMPLE MONEY HABIT

Set one manageable automated saving habit and spend 15 minutes reviewing the previous week's expenses. Keep this behavioural, not investment-focused.

WEEK 3 • NARROW THE FIELD

Choose one meaningful goal. Define three must-do details and one action you can repeat daily. Pause or defer lower-priority commitments.

WEEK 4 • STRENGTHEN DIRECT CONNECTION

Have one honest conversation with someone you trust. State what you need clearly, while leaving room for the other person's perspective.

DAY 30 • REVIEW THE EXPERIMENT

Ask: What became easier? What drained me? What did I avoid? What should I continue, stop or change for the next 30 days?

Your 30-day principle

Do less, but do it deliberately. Your report's strongest themes—care, thoughtfulness, persistence and steadiness—become more valuable when they are converted into small, repeatable actions.

5. Your Inksight Share Card

A compact, social-ready snapshot of three dimensions from your existing profile.

Suggested share caption

“My handwriting report says my strongest pattern is emotional balance—but my biggest opportunity is personal growth. Curious what yours might reveal? Explore Inksight.”

Note: This card is for self-reflection and entertainment and should not be presented as a scientifically validated personality assessment.

6. Method + Confidence

A transparent view of what was visible, what was interpreted and where the limits are.

07

You may be someone whose next level of growth comes less from more thinking and more from consistent action.

The Inksight evidence principle

A premium report should make the reasoning visible without pretending that interpretation is certainty. The number creates curiosity; the story creates perceived value; the evidence creates transparency; the action creates usefulness.

Final reminder

Keep what resonates with your lived experience, question what does not, and use the report as a conversation starter with yourself.
